TWO PIANO RECITALS.

John Duke and Ruth Clug Play at Acolian Hal.

Two planists played in Acolian Hall yesterday. In the afternoon John Duke attempted the performance of the Brahms F minor sonata and other significant compositions, which he presented in a comparatively insignificant. manner. His playing was marred by many false notes and was not of a character to uncover the musical content of such masterpleces as that of Brahms. In the evening Miss Buth Clug of fered a programme, of which the Bach "Chromatic Faifkasia and Fugue," Mozart's F major sonata and Beethoven's thirty-two variations in C minor were the most ambitious numbers. Miss Cluz demonstrated that she possessed agilf fingers, an accurate though not diversified technique, and a good fine. But there was nothing in her playing that transcended the limits of capable teaching. She was well schooled, but of musical insight and interpretative power she disclosed no evidence.

It is a source of continual wonder to listen to the daily planist. To play the plano well enough to please friends is not wholly easy, but to play well enough to to interest strangers is a formidable task. Why young persons who can offer only the commonplaces of the art parade their accomplishments in public is and must probably remain inexplicable. There are several regilly important planists and not a few good ones. There is little hope for those who are not quite the latter.
